st

What brings us here?

Objective: We want to simplify our mindset about contracting for procurement departments to efficiently administer and manage contracts

Many do not know where to start with negotiating a contract

Additional work is done on the back end, thus delaying negotiations

Obligations are not effectively communicated and can result in delay or breach

A blind negotiation is a recipe for disaster

Goal: To Shake Hands, Not Throw Fi

The “REN” Approach

What is the "REN" Approach?

- A methodology for negotiating contracts based on economics
- Shifting the contracting work to the beginning of negotiations
- Assessment of Needs, Wants and Waste
- Consideration of external factors

The Three Components of REN

Research → Evaluate → Negotiate

R → Research

- Before negotiations, conduct research on the scope of the contract
- Helps to avoid blind negotiations
- Ask the tough questions
- There is no "one way" to conduct research
- Benefits:
  - Saves time down the road
  - Transparency
  - Leverage

- Where do we stand?
- What is important? What is not important?
- What is our position on the terms and conditions?
- What is our plan for approaching these negotiations?
- What do we need? What do we want? What can we go without?

ants and Waste: Red Velvet Cake

Needs, Wants, Waste

Needs

- Must haves
- Hard-stops
- Required contract language
  - Statutory provisions
- Is this something that can cause us to walk away?

Wants

- Like to have
- Added bonuses or protections
- Bells and whistles

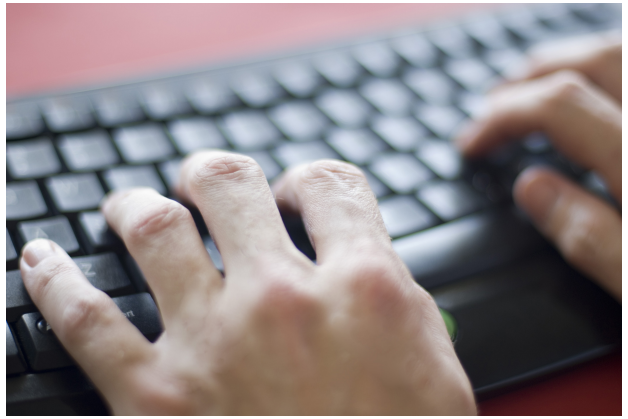

Waste

- Immaterial
- Do not affect the contract
- Filler (take up real estate within the contract)
- Non-applicable

Contract Obligation Management

Failing to prepare is, generally speaking, preparing very well to [illegible]ong thing

[illegible]TIST)

Contract Obligation Management

- Prior to signing the contract, it is important to understand the terms and conditions of the contract and your obligations under the contract
- Avoid:
  - Delays
  - Breaches
  - Late invoice payments
  - Termination of the contract
- Designate a "Contract Manager" who will be responsible to managing the obligations under the contract

WMS: The Three (Obligation) Muske

W	M	S
Will	Must	Shall

Example: Payment

3. Payment. "Company X will deliver the Software Licenses to University within 24 hours from the date the Agreement is executed. After delivery and acceptance of the Software Licenses, Company X will submit an acceptable invoice to University. Invoices must be itemized, reference the Agreement or purchase order number, and include sufficient detail to document the invoiced amount. Unless otherwise specified, University shall pay Company X for the Software Licenses delivered net-45 days after receipt by University of an invoice meeting the requirements of this Section 3."

Synthesize The Obligations

- Breaks down obligations of the contract into a manageable, easy-to-read form
- Identifies:
  - Task
  - Who is responsible for completing the task
  - When does the task need to be completed
  - Action plan for completing the task

Contract Obligation Plan

Supplier: Company X
Responsible Contract Manager: John Smith, Director of Compliance, Department of Economics
Execution Date of Contract: July 1, 2021

Task	Responsible Party	Due	Company X Plan of Action	University Plan of Action
Deliver software license	Company X	July 2, 2021	• Company X sends software licenses to John Smith and technical team member	• John Smith sends receipt of delivery to Company X within 24 hours
Send invoice to John Smith	Company X	After receipt of delivery received by Company X	• Company X sends invoice to John Smith
Verify invoice meets requirements	John Smith	Upon receipt of invoice		• John Smith to verify the invoice meets the requirements of the agreement • John Smith to reach out to Company X to either confirm receipt or request compliance.
Pay invoice	John Smith	45 days after invoice received		• John Smith to send invoice to financial services department for payment

Tips and Tricks

Guardrails

- Playbook for managing contract negotiations
  - Alternative language to utilize in the event a supplier takes exceptions
  - Describes who can approve certain contractual exceptions
- "If a supplier takes this exception, then try this…"
- Benefits
  - Helps to expedite contract negotiations
  - Fewer requests for exception reviews to internal approvers (legal, risk, information security, etc.)
- Recommendation: Work with your internal approvers (legal, risk, information security, etc.) to draft guardrails for contract negotiations

Internal Calls

- Excellent way to prepare a game plan for contract negotiations with your negotiation team
- Ensures everyone has all of the necessary information to properly evaluate contracts
- Prior to ANY counsel call, you should have an internal call with your negotiation team to ensure everyone is on the same page
  - Risk team
  - Legal team
  - Security team
  - Requesting department
  - Procurement

Conditional Language for Purchase Terms

- If your purchase order contains terms and conditions, include conditional language in the terms and conditions to emphasize when a term or condition applies
- “This provision applies if…”
- If the condition is met, then the provision applies. If the condition is not met, then the provision does not apply
- Helps to narrow scope of negotiations to provisions that apply to the scope of the transaction

Fusing Everything Together

In Summary…

- (i) Conduct research; (ii) evaluate what is needed, wanted and wasteful; and (iii) negotiate effectively (REN).
- Know when to walk away (and if you can).
- Before signing the contract, make sure you understand your obligations under the agreement (will, must, shall).
- Create guardrails to help expedite contract negotiations.
- Have an internal call with your negotiation team to ensure everyone is on the same page.
- Conditional language in your purchase order helps to keep negotiations focused on the material issues.
